Love your backwards design approach where you mention what you are expected to learn by the end of it

Liked how the audio is your actual voice and follows Mayer's principle of personalization

"Defining adult learners" section - maybe have option for larger font 18pts for example

To that, the background when clicking definitions still has background noise and may lack consideration for negative space - just be cautious

"Defining Andragogy" section good that there are images and writing at the same time in light of Mayer's Principles, better use of negative space to draw attention

"Mini-activity" maybe have centered writing because the contrast is not the best mixed with the remaining blue space so eyes get drawn away from the text that is the focal point

Use of bold throughout when changing subjects or titles can help space it out and highlight the manageable chunks a bit better so the Mayer's principle of segmenting is easier noted

I liked how clicking on it made it interactive! Made it feel more active and i
